

Mrs Herbert's Snow Day Challenge

If you have had enough of being out in the snow and are wondering what to do, why not take part in Mrs Herbert's Snow Day Challenge?

I am very upset that I can't get outside and enjoy the snow because of my injury. Whilst my ankle is getting better, it has made me think that this must be something that happens to other people as well.

My challenge to you is to design something that will help me get out and enjoy the snow - it can be as realistic or as futuristic as you like!

You could do some (or all) of the following:

- Draw a picture of your invention. Remember to label the different parts and what it is made of.
- Make a model of your invention.
- Write a description of your invention explaining how it works.
- Produce a poster for the national papers to advertise your invention (How will you make it sell?).
- Create an instruction leaflet to go with your invention.

You can write or use a computer but remember to think carefully about your presentation.

If you decide to take me up on my challenge, please bring your inventions into school and share them with me. I will judge the inventions and pick a winner from Early Years/Key Stage 1 and Key Stage 2.
